We seek authorization from Council to install plaques denoting the known burial sites of several original Loyalists who settled near present-day Colchester in the 1790s. (The Loyalists were colonists who sided with the British during the American Revolution and who were pressured into leaving the United States after the conflict ended.) The plaques are metal, measure 18 X 24", and were professionally designed. The local Loyalists we wish to honour include: Alexander McCormick, John Alexander Quick, John Snider, and Rudolph Huffman. They are buried in various "inactive" cemeteries on or near their homestead farms. The plaques feature a QR code that links to a page on the Bicentennial Branch website, where brief biographies of these Loyalist families will be posted, including their historic roles they played during the early days of settlement in the Town of Essex. This information will augment existing provincial historic plaques and municipal recognition of their significance, such as the recent Heritage designation of the John Snider house by the Town of Essex.
